

POKA-POKA Project for Fukushima Children

Radiation free days at hot springs

ぽかぽかプロジェクト

Watari District is one of the most severely polluted areas in Fukushima City. Since high levels of radiation exceeding $2\mu\text{Sv}/\text{hour}$ are still observed across the District, Watari residents are urging the government to help them evacuate at least children until decontamination is completed.

To respond to the urgent situation in Watari District, we are launching the “Tsuchiyu Hot Springs Project.” This project will invite families in Watari District to spend a few days at hotels near Tsuchiyu Hot Springs located on the west side of Fukushima City. The Tsuchiyu Hot Springs area is far less polluted than Watari District. This project will allow children to spend time away from high levels of radiation while helping the local economy recover from the nuclear disaster.

To carry out the temporary evacuation project, we need your help in raising money to subsidize costs of travel and accommodation for families in Watari District. We hope that many families will be able to participate in the project. Thank you for your help.
