ENVIRONMENTAL RACISM

“Environmental racism refers to any environmental policy, practice or directive that differentially affects or disadvantages (whether intended or unintended) individuals, groups or communities based on race or colour.”

loss of livelihoods for us fishermen

“Ever since the liquefied natural gas plant began operations, my health has deteriorated significantly. I have developed persistent burns, sores on my head, and other health issues.... Our shrimp business has suffered tremendously. Our local catch has diminished so much it costs more to fish than we earn after expenses. The decline has forced us to sell our boat and seek work in different fields, a challenging transition at our age.”

~ Carla & Mervin Mallett

FOR THE ENVIRONMENT

A photograph showing two Greenpeace activists in kayaks on the water. They are wearing safety gear, including helmets and life jackets. The activist in the foreground is wearing a yellow jacket and a black life jacket, while the one behind is wearing a red jacket and a black life jacket. They are holding a large yellow sign that reads "SOLIDARITY WITH THE U.S. GULF SOUTH" and "GREENPEACE". In the background, there is a large offshore oil rig structure with multiple levels and pipes. The water is a murky green color. Other kayakers are visible in the distance.
